MEDIA ADVISORY/PHOTO OPPORTUNITY

UMS Undergraduate Research Day at the State Capitol on March 23

WHO:

More than thirty undergraduate University of Maine System students from across the state will showcase their research projects. All seven universities will be represented.

WHAT:

Projects featured will range from research on Maine's commercial forest and agricultural land, to the development of a leak detection system for NASA's inflatable lunar habitats, to work examining ways to protect and preserve the state's aquaculture.

WHEN/WHERE:

Friday, March 23, from 8:30 a.m. to 1:00 p.m. in the State Capitol's Hall of Flags in Augusta.

FOR MORE INFO:

UMS Vice Chancellor for Academic Affairs James Breece will be on hand to answer questions. A handout profiling the undergraduate students and their projects on display will be available at the event.
